According to a recent survey conducted by the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), only 60% of workers plan to get the COVID-19 vaccine, with another 30% indicating they won't get the vaccine, even if it means losing their jobs. Other employees are refusing to participate in or otherwise objecting to continued COVID-19 testing protocols while demanding that they be permitted to simply return to the office or work remotely permanently.

Employers and HR professionals now face a whole new set of issues concerning mandatory vaccines, incentive programs and unvaccinated employees as they try to provide a safe workplace and manage legal risks. This webinar will address strategies to manage through this maze of confusion, regulation and emotion.
